

Welcome to the 2023 TDSB Student Census!

The Census is an opportunity for you to share who you are and your experiences at school. Students have had a say in what questions are being asked.

The Census is voluntary, but we hope that you will complete it.

The Census is confidential. No one will see your individual answers. You will not get in trouble or hurt anyone's feelings with your answers.

The Census is not anonymous. Though no one will see your individual answers, your survey answers are linked to your student ID number so that researchers who work for the school board can match your survey results with other pieces of data like grades. This helps to identify barriers that impact groups of students, which is the main goal of the Census. No individual students will be identified and student answers are never examined at the individual level.

. Do you wish to participate in the TDSB Student Census?

. This section asks questions about your identity, and how things you see, hear, or learn in school reflect your identity. Your identity can be shaped by things like who you are, how you think about yourself, and how other people see you.

Sometimes, we can be treated differently in school based on our identity. The Census tries to find out what issues students are facing at their school. The Census can be really helpful for telling school leaders the kinds of things that should be improved for different groups of students at the TDSB. We learn about different groups of students by asking identity questions (like gender, culture, race, etc.).

First Nations, Métis, and Inuit are some of the terms used to identify Indigenous people in what is now known as Canada.

Indigenous identity is complex and Indigenous people in Canada can refer to themselves with many other terms such as Native, Aboriginal, name of their Nation, etc. Knowing this information can help TDSB develop programs and supports for Indigenous students in collaboration with the Urban Indigenous Education Centre.

Q50. Do you identify as an Indigenous person?

. Ethnic, cultural, or national groups usually have a similar culture, language and/or religion. They often have a shared identity, heritage, ancestry, or historical past.

Ideas about who belongs to a race can be based on physical features (like skin colour, eyes, hair, etc.). People are often described as belonging to a certain “race” based on how others see and behave toward them. Other times, people can belong to a racial group even though other people don’t see them as part of that group. There can often be several ethnic, cultural, or national identities within a racialized group.

These questions ask about your ethnic, cultural, national, and racial identity. Since there are so many unique identities in the TDSB, these options might not capture everyone. If that is the case, feel free to describe your identity in your own words.

Q54. What is your ethnic or cultural origin(s)? (Select all that apply)
